WHAT GORRINGE SAYS.

The Naval Officer Resigns to Secure Redress at the Hands of Secretary Chandler.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Washington, Feb 23.—A representative of the [illegible] called upon Commander Gorringe [illegible] and I asked him whether it was true that he had tendered his resignation as an officer in the United States navy. He replied that he did so, but the president has not yet accepted the resignation.

"It is reported that you have had some sharp correspondence with Secretary Chandler. Are you willing to furnish the press with a copy of that correspondence?"

Answer—As long as I am in the service it would be very improper for me to do so although I am perfectly willing the public should know the contents of that letter. As soon as I am freed from official restraint I will give you the correspondence.

Question—Is it true that you represent an English capitalist in your new enterprise of ship building at Philadelphia?

A.—It is absolutely and unqualifiedly false. Not a dollar of English capital has been solicited or subscribed, and the money to operate the Reading yard, which has been leased to me individually has been wholly subscribed by my personal friends in New York city.

Q.—Have you ever represented English capital, or foreign interests?

A.—Never. With one exception I was asked to make a critical examination of the progress of the Buffalo and West Shore railroad by an English banker, a personal friend from whom I declined to receive compensation of any kind.

Q.—It is rumored that you have been advocating free ships in the interest of English builders. Is there any foundation for such a rumor?

A.—I pronounce the rumor unqualifiedly false. It bears on its face the evidence of falsehood from the fact that I myself am about to engage, with the assistance of American capital, in building American ships.

Q.—What explanation can you give of the secretary's action as reported in a special dispatch from Washington, and published to day?

A.—The secretary of the navy has placed himself in this matter in an attitude toward me which can not fail to rouse against him the indignation of every honorable man in this country. His attack on me was without excuse as will appear when the correspondence is published unless he was himself, acting in his official capacity in a private interest.

Q.—When did you make up your mind to tender your resignation?

A.—When I received the secretary's letter February 10 which was grossly insulting to me as an officer and man. I determined to have redress. My reply to his letter elicited no response except in the course of several days when a peremptory order to come to Washington to await further orders was sent to me. I came to Washington and upon inquiry at the department found it impossible for me to have redress so long as I remained an officer and subject to his control. I was determined to have redress, so I resigned in order that I might seek it from the highest authority.

Q.—What is the sentiment of naval officers in regard to your resignation?

A.—All yesterday afternoon and to-day I have been receiving personal visits, letters and telegrams from my brother officers begging me if I have not resigned to reconsider my determination, and expressing for me the warmest regard and their regret that I intended to sever my connection with the service. I have given them all the same answer. The course I am pursuing is in the interest of every officer of the navy, and that, as I never hitherto regarded my personal interests as more important than those of the service, I shall not do so now.

FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

Programme of the New Ministry.

Paris, Feb 23.—In the chamber of deputies to day Prime Minister Ferry explained the programme of the ministry and asked the confidence of the country. He said the government's first care would be, if satisfactory to the chamber, to apply the law of 18[illegible] under which princes would be deprived of their military posts. The government thought nothing more was necessary for the present. If the republic was in danger, and in event of a conspiracy it would have ample power to protect itself by the rights inherent in all governments, without infringing upon the essential liabilities of the people. The government demanded that measures be taken against utterances of a seditious nature and against authorized seditious placards initiating questions and fruitless discussion. He said such must be set aside, leaving to the government the initiative which belongs to it as a right. The government proposes to facilitate the execution of public works and introduce measures looking to the organization of a protectorate in Tunis and a reduction of the expenses of occupation of that country. The foreign policy of the government will be peaceful but whenever our interests and honor are engaged we must maintain France in the rank to which she is entitled.

ENGLAND.

House of Commons.

London, Feb 23.—In the commons to day Hartington expressed surprise at Parnell's silence, which was an admission that a prima facie case has been established against the Irish leaders. The government has no intention of introducing any measure for an extensive change in its policy with regard to Ireland that will be likely to arouse strong party feeling and absorb a large portion of the house debate. He repeated that government opposition had formulated no direct specific charges against them. He asked the house whether seeing there was no ground for argument with regard to the policy of the government it would choose Gorst's amendment which if carried would have the effect of removing the ministry from office.

Northcote, liberal conservative said the opposition would meet the government's challenge. He would state the manner to-morrow.

A Lively War of Words Between Members of the House.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Washington, Feb 23.—During a debate on the navy bill in the senate Anthony offered an amendment appropriating $[illegible] for the [illegible] of the navy to build [illegible] cruiser [illegible]

McPherson, in discussing the amendment alluded to the presence of the secretary of the navy in the senate chamber [illegible] in conversation with Anthony and went on to make an attack upon the secretary who was [illegible] in the lobby. He had great respect for the president [illegible] the country an administration as worthy of approval as the one preceding, but he feared that when this appropriation bill should have become a law as it certainly would because the secretary of the navy has so ordered, even the president would become convinced that mistakes were possible. The president heading the list has [illegible] with character and ability the purest and best but even before reaching the end of the list he has descended by one gigantic stride to the lobby, with all that it implied.

Anthony said the [illegible] amendment by instructions of the committee on naval affairs [illegible] request of the secretary of the navy. The secretary had a right to be on the floor of the senate and the rules and his presence called for no such comment as that made by McPherson.

Rollins said he had heard McPherson's remarks with great surprise, that the senator's criticism upon the secretary was unjust and dangerous to the extreme, and he (Rollins) hoped it would not be repeated.

Hale raised a point of order that the amendment proposed was new legislation and the chair sustained the point of order.

Blaine to the Rescue.

Washington, Feb 23.—Special to the Chicago Times: Blaine has his hand upon the helm. The influence of that dashing and ready politician, with his stores of parliamentary knowledge and expedients was felt in the republican caucus that [illegible] this afternoon in the hall of representatives. Blaine has been at the capital of late ostensibly to collect material for political memories he is engaged in writing but there have been consultations with Kelley and other high tariff republicans who have been floundering for two weeks on parliamentary quicksands that threaten to engulf them. The hopeless incompetency of republican leaders of the house in the present crisis was practically confessed this afternoon when Blaine was called to the rescue. He first repaired to the congressional library and busied himself in a secluded alcove while notice of his presence was privately communicated to Keifer, Haskell, McKinley and a few others. Perhaps some people may believe the story that the Maine statesman merely visited the library to ascertain whether a painting lately purchased by him was a work of one of the old masters but the advice of John Sherman and Pig Iron Kelley could not have been of much value to him in a matter of high art. A little later Blaine, Kelley, McKinley and others held a consultation in McKinley's committee room. As it was [illegible] held in the interest of monopolists who have balked [illegible] of tariff legislation when it was found to be [illegible] in the direction of public benefit it was not inappropriate that Mr. James Park, Jr. of Pennsylvania should also be present to represent the wishes of iron and steel manufacturers. Mr. Park is credited with having said that [illegible] the senate [illegible] house tariff bill shall pass unless the rates on iron and steel are advanced. This little caucus in the committee room was to map out a plan for the high tariff republicans, which was to be urged upon the general caucus as the only proper policy for the party. It was a conference to devise a method to circumvent lower tariff republicans and democratic tariff reformers who were disposed to vote to concurring in the senate tariff schedules appended to the internal revenue bill.

The Shipping Bill.

The senate committee on commerce took final action on the shipping bill to day, and [illegible] a favorable report be made upon it to the senate. The committee have amended the bill by striking out the 14th section, which delegated to collectors of port duties now performed by shipping commissioners and have also added a section which authorizes the postmaster general to contract for the carriage of mails in ocean steamships of American register provided that he shall pay not exceeding $100 per mile [illegible] shall not exceed one and a half millions per annum. Contracts are to be given by advertisement and contracts are to be awarded to the lowest bidder regardless of the size of the vessel, and only provided that the vessel is of American register and owned and run by Americans. The section also contains a provision that a drawback of an equal amount of duty shall be allowed on all foreign material used in the construction or repair of American vessels.

Davis will Resign in March.

Washington, Feb 23.—It is learned upon good authority that Senator Davis, president pro tem of the senate, will resign on the third of March in time to allow his successor to be elected without requiring an extra session. It is understood that Senator Davis resigns with the stipulation that the present organization of offices of the senate, which is controlled by democrats shall not be disturbed until the regular session next December. It cannot be told with certainty what effect upon an extra session the possible failure of the senate to act upon the Mexican treaty may have. If the treaty be not ratified before the 30th of March it is possible that the president may think it wise to call an extra session especially for that purpose.

Only One Way.

Washington, Feb 23.—Republican members of the house held a caucus this evening lasting nearly three hours. A full discussion of the tariff question was had and the only conclusion arrived at was the tariff bill should be given to the conference committee as the only safe way of perfecting a bill which would satisfy the expectations of the country.

The Spoils.

Washington, Feb 23.—It is reported that Senator Miller will recommend the appointment of Ex Senator Thorp for pension agent at San Francisco. Mr. Page is advocating the appointment of [illegible] District Attorney Teal.

Caucus Developments.

The republican caucus on the tariff this afternoon developed the fact clearly that with a solid democratic vote, there is a large majority in the house in favor of the passage of the senate bill. It also showed that there is a majority of republicans in favor of non concurrence in the senate amendment. A majority of the house committee [illegible] any opposition to [illegible] the rules while it is certain there is a majority in the house in favor of non concurrence.

SPORTING.

Carver Wins by One Bird.

Louisville, Feb 23. The [illegible] was disagreeable for the contests between Captain A. H. Bogardus and Dr. W. F. Carver of California. The match was shot on the grounds of the Jockey club. Seven or eight hundred persons were present and considerable money was put up in bets on an average at the opening being about 100 [illegible] Bogardus to 80 [illegible] Carver. Last night the latter's friends grew more confident and he crept up in the pools. Before the opening the match pools sold 100 on Bogardus to 80 on Carver. Then even bets were offered and accepted. The terms of the match were 100 birds, 30 yards rise with 80 yards boundary. Both men appeared calm and confident. At a few minutes past 2 o'clock they were called to work, Col. John McHarbour of this city acting as referee with two judges. The birds used were tame pigeons and did not fly well. Bogardus failed to score on the second bird which fell dead 40 yards outside the limits. Carver missed the 15th and 16th and Bogardus missed the 19th and the score stood a tie. Carver fell behind on the 20th with a miss. When the 50th bird was reached there was a tie, each having killed 48. At the 70th shot Bogardus had [illegible] Carver [illegible] [illegible] From the [illegible] the 90th Carver gained [illegible] Both [illegible] but the contestants were cool and [illegible]. At the 96th bird Bogardus missed and Carver [illegible] defeating his antagonist by one bird. The score stood Carver 8[illegible], Bogardus 82. Time two hours and forty minutes. There was nothing to mar the good feeling, the match passing off pleasantly and without protest. The crowd cheered lustily at the finish and all joined in hearty [illegible] for Carver [illegible] victory. Carver's stakes and gate money was over $1,000.

Senate.

[illegible]

Hale favored the [illegible] and called especial attention to the fact that the present secretary was not in favor of completing the work under the contracts entered into by Hon. George M. Robeson as secretary of the navy. Those old contracts are dead and nobody is seeking to renew or give life to them and the question of finishing these vessels is in the hands of congress. We have great need of such vessels as these, designed for harbor defense.

Voorhees said that Hale's appeal might have been quite impressive if addressed to those who knew nothing of the history of these vessels for the past eight years. Eight years ago under the administration of General Grant these five iron clads were ordered rebuilt and how many of them were in the water? No one. Altogether the government had several new yards but these iron clads had been ordered into the hands of private contractors and kept standing through all these years as a means of paying political debts and levying political assessments. Why else had they been left so long unfinished?

Plumb said one reason was that for six years past congress had not appropriated anything to continue the work upon them.

Voorhees thought the senator mistaken. He understood that $3,000,000 had been spent in rebuilding these vessels which cost about $3,000,000 and there was not a senator upon the floor who could make an estimate of what amount would be required to complete them. The whole business was a scandal, outrage and crime and it was only ended by ordering the secretary of the navy to take the vessels out of the hands of John Roach and other private companies and have them completed in the government yards.

Bayard said the single question was whether it would be wise to vote a million dollars to place engines and machinery in these four double turreted iron clads. In 1877 the construction of these vessels under contracts made by the preceding secretary was suspended by Secretary Thompson and a cloud of suspicion cast upon the work which has never since been fully removed. Though it had been attacked unjustly, he thought in some cases. An advisory board [illegible] fully, and reported in favor of completing the ships and it seemed wise for the senate to be guided by their recommendation.

Ingalls inquired how much money in addition to what had been already expended upon these vessels would be required to complete them.

Allison replied that the estimates footed $[illegible]

The committee recurred to the portion of the sundry civil bill relating to the survey of public lands which had been passed over informally.

On motion of Ryan an amendment was adopted [illegible] surveys which [illegible] may be used for the [illegible] in any suit or proceeding on behalf of the United States.

After some discussion the paragraph making an appropriation for a survey of private land claims in New Mexico and Arizona was amended to prohibit any appropriation being used for preliminary surveys of unconfirmed private land claims.

[illegible] offered an amendment

REPEALING THE PRE-EMPTION LAWS

Together with the laws authorizing the filing of declaratory statements for entry of public lands by agent or attorney.

Washburn argued that the amendment continuing the pre-emption laws should be repealed. The manner in which public lands are taken up under those laws is a perfect scandal. No honest man could file a legitimate claim without being prosecuted by adventurers and land sharks, and now is the time to have this matter stopped. The public lands have been dedicated to actual settlers and they should be guarded for that purpose. Congress should shut out this

ARMY OF HARPIES

And adventurers who went out west in order to stop the life blood of that developing country.

The amendment was adopted in full. The text is as follows: Provided that the pre-emption laws together with all laws authorizing filing of declaratory statements for entries of public lands by agent or attorney be and the same are hereby repealed. Provided, further that this repeal shall not affect the disposal of lands under treaty resolutions with Indian tribes, nor be deemed to impair any legal rights heretofore acquired under the laws hereby repealed but all existing entries, settlements or filings may be perfected upon the proper proof of a full and bona fide character that said claims are of due compliance with the provisions and requirements of laws under which the entries, settlements or filings were made and provided further that any person who has heretofore made or may hereafter make entry [illegible] of public lands under the homestead laws shall have the privilege of Investigation of the Wreck of the Steamer Tacoma.

The Captain's Excuse is the Compass Was Wrong.

San Francisco to Have a New Water Company.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

San Francisco, Feb 23.—Official inquiry into the loss of the steamer Tacoma was commenced this forenoon before United States Inspectors Holman and Freeman.

Captain George D. Roberts testified to the course sailed by the vessel from the time of leaving Port Townsend without passengers but with 37 persons on board. After passing Cape Flattery the log was hove every two hours by an officer of the deck for the purpose of safety. At 4 o'clock A.M. of the 9th the weather was thick and the rate of speed was lessened but the sun coming out subsequently the weather cleared. [illegible] finally to warrant going at full speed. When

RECKONINGS WERE TAKEN

It was noted that at 9 o'clock in the evening the deviation of the compass was three degrees east. There was some difference between the standard compass on the bridge and the pilot house compass, amounting to about seven degrees on the south by west [illegible] course and a deviation of three eighths of a point in the standard compass from the true course. Coming down the straits of Fuca it was found that the bearings did not correspond with the deviation card which was not rectified. Though [illegible] put all night orders in writing. It was not done the night the vessel struck. He was asked what was the latitude and longitude of the vessel the day previous. He hesitated considerably and finally said he had forgotten. The engineer had not reported relative to the number as he was in the habit of doing, having [illegible] down in the engine room, and observing the he gave orders to have a certain speed maintained which some times was kept and other times not. The last orders were to keep the vessel at fifty revolutions per minute. Afterward he saw the speed was too great and ordered it reduced to forty revolutions. The chief engineer disobeyed this order because he had not been consulted in the matter. The first intimation that the steamer was near shore was when she struck. He ordered the helm put hard to port, the engine had been stopped when witness came on deck, weather thick, wind southwest, had no life boats on board, starboard boats were swamped when launched. No boats that [illegible] sea was running high. Next morning, in company with two guests not passengers, went into a boat but returned to the steamer because he considered the venture unsafe. Got a line to take ashore, but failed to take it there because the boat would undoubtedly have been swamped. He was certain none of the officers or men understood the management of a line. Went ashore first because advised by one of his guests to do so and for a further reason, because he had no officer whom he could trust. After he reached the shore everything possible was done to save the men on board the steamer. The first attempt made, the party consisted of himself, first and third officers, volunteers and Mr. Burgman [illegible] Gardner City. The boat nearly swamped and another effort was made but the boat pitched [illegible] the day after two boats landed [illegible] came ashore. [illegible] discouraged the second attempt next morning the masts fell and the men aboard perished.

SPEED OF THE VESSEL,

J. L. Simmons first officer corroborated the captain's statements regarding the deviation of the compass, saw land during the afternoon about 4 [illegible] when he left the deck at 7 o'clock in the evening the weather was hazy with light wind.

SECOND OFFICER IN COMMAND

No night order book was aboard. Orders were sometimes written on a slate when the vessel struck. He was [illegible] about two points off the port [illegible] ship showed signs of breaking up at [illegible] an hour after. Came ashore next morning about 12 o'clock without serious trouble. Leaving [illegible] deck officers on the ship impossible to get to the ship [illegible] men [illegible] four seamen in the fore rigging [illegible] on the port side of the house which was [illegible] time afterwards torn from the deck and he thought the men were swept away. A line was subsequently brought to the ship and made fast but as it was a three fourths inch line it was [illegible] less.

Second officer was also examined, but told nothing new.

Telegraphic Personals.

San Francisco, Feb 23.—The steamer Columbia arrived [illegible] after a very pleasant voyage, during which [illegible] became necessary to use the sails, in consequence of an accident to the machinery.

H. D. Greene arrived on the steamer this forenoon and after a brief stay leaves for Los Angeles.

C. W. Burrage and wife are among the latest arrivals. They propose visiting the watering places.

Spying Out the Land.

San Francisco, Feb 23.—James Duncan who arrived from Oregon this morning, where he has resided for the past six months investigating opportunities for the investment of English capital, and who located certain mining claims states that he is not prepared to make a statement until the business assumes definite shape. He brought with him large amounts of auriferous ore which have been given him by a prominent assayer with a view to accurately determining the value of the location.

Promotions.

San Francisco, Feb 23.—A. D. Edgar freight agent of the O. R. & N. Co. has been appointed general passenger agent of the Northern Pacific railroad with headquarters at Chicago. Charles A. Hopkins purser of the steamer Columbia has been promoted to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Edgar's appointment.

Will Probably Pass.

San Francisco, Feb 23.—A special telegram received here states that in all probability the appropriation for a Pacific coast survey will be successfully passed, including an item of $100,000 for the construction of a steamer which when completed will do duty in northern waters.

Test Case.

The supreme court has granted a writ of mandate compelling the auditor to audit the claim of Herman [illegible] one of the extra clerks in the tax collector's office. It had been made a test case, the auditor taking the position that only officers whose salary was fixed by law could have demands paid when the funds are unequal to the expenses.

SHERIDAN INTERVIEWED.

The Man Accused by Informer Carey with Complicity in the Phoenix Park Tragedy Makes a Statement.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

New York, Feb [illegible] issue of [illegible] interview with [illegible] the informer [illegible] Ireland stated to be an [illegible]

Reporter—[illegible] leaving New York [illegible] the English [illegible]?

Sheridan—[illegible] within the [illegible] remain in New York. If the British government wishes to know where I am he will find me at my desk in the [illegible] any day of the week.

Reporter—Do you think the consequences might be [illegible] placed in the dock in Dublin?

Sheridan—[illegible] law in Ireland are organized simply to [illegible] victims are wanted. I know the [illegible] into its clutches [illegible] as though I disproved every charge which informer Carey has sworn against me, but my innocence or guilt would [illegible] the issue.

Reporter—With such [illegible] would it not be better [illegible] treaty [illegible]?

Sheridan—If there were [illegible] than an individual's safety [illegible] but I feel my [illegible] that will result in giving the American [illegible] probable [illegible] Such an expression [illegible] good results for Ireland [illegible]

Reporter—Do you [illegible] the prisoners in Ireland?

Sheridan—No. Dr. Nulty's life is no [illegible] than James Mullett's [illegible] the English government [illegible] deemed it politic to hang him. If Carey, Kavanagh and Farrell found it necessary, to save their [illegible] to swear that Dr. Nulty killed Cavendish and Burke, they would do it. The government has only to name its victims, and the informers will swear accordingly to order.

Reporter—Supposing these men should be hanged, what do you think will be the result?

Sheridan—That is a matter only to be guessed at. There is one thing however, of which I have no doubt and that is that Ireland was never so determined on the achievement of her independence, and never so straight on the track of obtaining it as she is at this hour.

Reporter—Do you know this informer, Carey, who says he was introduced to you at the Angel hotel, in Dublin?

Sheridan—I never met the man in my life. His [illegible] to an interview with me in the Angel hotel of Dublin and his statement about my promising to forward him [illegible] arms from London, are sheer fabrications, and convince me that his story has been concocted in Dublin castle, and Carey, in order to save his miserable neck, volunteered to swear to it in the witness box.

Reporter—As a matter of fact have you ever been in the disguise of a priest in Ireland, as alleged?

Sheridan—[illegible] I found it necessary to visit Ireland for two reasons, which I will give you and being aware of the fact that a general order was issued from the castle [illegible] to arrest me if I was found in any part of Ireland. At that time the British government was arresting every Irishman who was thought to be [illegible] to the land league cause. I therefore assumed the disguise of a priest and went to Ireland first for the purpose of arranging for the [illegible] of some property, of which I had been robbed during my [illegible] imprisonment and exile, and second for the purpose of putting down agrarianism [illegible] by a process of [illegible] in my opinion [illegible] the most [illegible] weapon within the [illegible] I also found it necessary to inquire into the alleged [illegible] and abuses in connection with the expenditures of land league funds.

Reporter—Do you think if you had been allowed to return to Ireland you could have prevented many of those acts of bloodshed?

Sheridan—I have no doubt that if myself and other active men then either in prison or exile, were allowed to move about as usual amongst the people society would be spared these horrible exhibitions or most of them that followed. Forster [illegible] and otherwise, and on him and him alone, rests the responsibility of the Maamtrasna, [illegible], Ballina, Phoenix park and like tragedies throughout Ireland. In fact, Forster has, on the floor of the house of commons, admitted his responsibility of the acts committed by officers of the law and I feel that history will charge him with the responsibility of crimes committed by the people. He it is that should be on his trial for the massacres—Phoenix park included.

Reporter—In your opinion have any land league funds been employed for promoting disorder in Ireland as alleged?

Sheridan—Such presumption can only emanate from one of two sources—either total ignorance of the land league policy and its leaders or an ill concealed desire to disparage both.

Reporter—Have you distributed any money in Ireland during your disguised sojourn there?

Sheridan—I have. When [illegible] charged that I was engaged in fomenting disorder, I was occupied in bringing succor to men, women and children whom he left without a home or morsel to eat. One case is noteworthy. Finding myself in a poverty-stricken district in Munster, I discovered that fourteen evicted families were forced to seek shelter on Christmas day, under a fence on Valetia island, on the west coast of Kerry. You will please note this for a sample of the outrages committed by the man in disguise of a priest.

Reporter—Have you witnessed any eviction scenes in Ireland?

Sheridan—Yes, many. During my connection with the land league I visited the scenes of some of these evictions and gathered carloads of women and children from under fences in the depth of winter. On one occasion I have seen a fever stricken patient, carried on a pallet from his poor cabin and placed on a dung heap, which was covered at the time with a foot of snow. While the sheriff was going through the legal form of taking possession the poor man expired with snow flakes falling on his dry face.

A Swede named Ole Olsen fell from one of the coal bunkers at New Tacoma breaking an arm and sustaining injuries about the head.

SATURDAY MORNING, FEB. 24, 1883.

A VERY PRACTICAL QUESTION.

An inquirer would like to have these questions answered, viz: (1) What is protection? (2) What is free trade? (3) Would the maintenance of the protective system be equivalent to establishing free trade?

Precise definitions are seldom practicable. On most mooted points the controversy begins with a dispute over the very words and terms employed by the contestants. Thus, the protectionist's definition of free trade always presents free trade as a very objectionable, injurious and odious thing; while the free trader's definition of protection seldom concedes to the protective system any merit whatever, or admits that under any circumstances it can produce beneficial results.

Viewed in a practical way, there must be more or less modification of definitions on both sides of this question. Mere theory on either side is good for nothing. Every government must have a revenue, and no means have yet been found for dispensing with collection of duties on imports. Practically, therefore, the question resolves itself into an inquiry as to the course to be pursued in laying on duties. On one side it is insisted that revenue should be the chief or sole object, on the other, that revenue is secondary, and that the true principle is to discriminate against foreign goods.

Under existing conditions, therefore, the term free trade has come to signify a schedule of duties on imported goods levied for revenue. The object is not to keep out foreign commodities, but to collect a tax from them; and it is insisted that low duties produce a larger aggregate revenue than high duties, because those persons able to purchase an article at five dollars are more than twice as numerous as those able to purchase it at ten dollars; and those able to buy it at one dollar are probably ten times as many as those who buy it at five dollars. Protection, on the other hand, does not look to cheapness as its first object. Primarily it is employed to obstruct the importation of foreign goods, so that higher prices may be obtained for home commodities. It is claimed, however, that this policy brings its compensations in the employment of home labor at higher prices and in the promotion of industrial activity among our own people; but on the other side, it is as vehemently asserted that no real benefits can be obtained from a system which is nothing more nor less than a tax on trade, intended to be obstructive, so that higher prices may be collected from the consumer by the home manufacturer. It is, therefore, apparent that the question is largely one of conflicting interests. Individuals favor protection or free trade, as their interests may be affected by one policy or the other. Localities do the same. The manufacturing district insists on protection as the perfection of the country's industrial system, while the non-manufacturing district, which finds itself cut off from the cheap commodities of foreign countries, objects to "paying tribute" to such manufacturers in other parts of our country.

Though there is much talk about free trade, the protective system cannot be discontinued; first, because the needs of the government for revenue assure a certain amount of protection; and second, because abrupt discontinuance of the protective system would give a rude and dangerous shock to the industry and business of the country. Some reduction, however, there ought to be and must be. The existing tariff has long presented certain monopoly features under which a large part of the country is growing restive; and recognition of this fact is causing congress to give up nearly the whole of the present session to consideration of the subject, with a view of making such reductions as will satisfy the public demand and at the same time of avoiding such sweeping changes as would produce industrial and commercial disorder. The tariff question is to be settled on no theoretical basis. It is a very practical thing.

WORK FOR ARMY AND NAVAL OFFICERS.

Back of most of the talk in the senate about the military appropriation bill lies the question of how our army and naval officers shall be employed. The necessity of maintaining a large number of men skilled in the operations of land and ocean warfare and ready at immediate notice to take the field in command of troops or to man gunboats is appreciated by everybody. The nation must be ready in the emergency of war to apply at once all the advantages of skill and discipline. There is no time to train generals, admirals and captains when war is upon us. We must have them already trained and at ready call. And yet the great mass of the nation protests against maintaining them in idleness. The toiling millions object to keeping under heavy pay a large class of men for social service at the national capital, or to maintain a useless round of sham parades and picnic court-marshals at a hundred useless posts. This is contrary to the spirit of the American people, and their protests are not surprising.

And further, the very idleness in which most of the officers of our army and navy are maintained, does them and our war service direct and positive injury. Idleness is the ruin of discipline, and participation in the gossips, small scandals and jealousies of post life unfit men for the stern and active duties of war. Habitual idlers are not men of great deeds. And, too, idleness begets dissipation and vice, and in the train of these follow incompetency and cowardice. To withstand these natural tendencies requires a noble quality of manhood. Daily industry, though it be not in the strict line of military service, or even though it bear no relation whatever to military duty, would improve the soldier by improving the man. Army and naval officers are idle, not because they choose to do nothing, but because they have nothing to do. Our present officers, as a rule, are not naturally idlers. Many of them have seen service in its most dangerous and trying forms, and nearly all of them deprecate more than their severest critics the do-nothing state which is forced upon them. The eagerness with which they seek position in the engineer corps, which, in time of peace, is the only seriously hard working service, is evidence of a pervading industrious spirit. We doubt if notice of an increase of pay would be received by army officers with as much pleasure as notification that they had something to do—some part of the active world's work.

The question is, what can they do in time of peace to earn their pay, to maintain the discipline of good habits and yet be ready at trumpet-call to go into the field. The way is not difficult. Employment of engineer officers in the work of river and harbor improvement has exhibited the best results. Works under their charge have been conducted with intelligence, disbursements as a rule have been honestly if not always economically made, and better than all, the corrupt hand of the politician has been kept from a great branch of public employment and expenditure. This instance is worth attention. Wherever the government has a work in progress, instead of appointing some congressman's incompetent and partisan friend to superintend it, let an engineer officer, selected with care as to his qualifications, be put in charge. And wherever great disbursement of funds is to be made, let it be through an officer properly accountable, and not through a politician who must first serve his patron's interest or some congressman, next his strikers and last the government. And let naval officers be detailed throughout the country as inspectors of hulls, boilers, etc. These positions are generally given to men for party services and without regard to qualification, or, oftentimes, consideration for personal character. How much better would it be if such positions were in the hands of men fitted by professional training and experience to fill them, men wholly free from personal interest in the matters upon which they must pass judgment and wholly outside of partisan rings.

The Indian service, too, affords a wide and proper field for employment of army officers. Instead of putting men in charge of the service because they have served the party, or, as in many cases, because they are of a particular religious sect, let army officers uninfluenced by relations either to party or church be assigned to the work. Let army discipline guard the performance of it and there will be fewer scandals and less shameless robbery. The capacity of the soldier to deal with the Indian has been fully demonstrated. With the strong hand he has corrected the troubles growing out of the bad system of religio-political management, and as the gentler and better service of elevating the Indian by education and industry, he has been no less successful. Perhaps the greatest need of the Indian is discipline, and who can impress it upon him so well as the disciplined soldier?

In the services we have named and in many other departments of national employment, officers could be detailed, with benefit to the military profession by affording it something to do, with advantage to the people at large in better and impartial work, and with a degree of reform to the civil service by contracting it. Our civil service will never reach the point where it will not need to be reformed. The surest measure of reform is to contract it.

SOME STARTLING FACTS.

The work of the census is by no means complete, and its whole results may not be obtainable for a year to come. But from statements and tables sent out from time to time there is much to learn and much to study. Mr. F. H. Wines has charge of that department of the census which deals with the defective, dependent and delinquent. Tables recently furnished by him are worthy of serious examination. Why the tramp and the inmate of the almshouse should come with the locomotive and with the fast growing development of the country; whether the intensity of our lives and the modes of living are exhausting our nervous vitality till insanity follows; and lastly, whether, as we increase in numbers, there comes a far larger percentage of inferior men and women, in body and mind, are questions the census tables very pertinently ask. Possibly the census of 1880 was more carefully taken than the former one, but still that of 1870 was not so far wrong that a reasonable comparison cannot be made as to the relative increase of insanity, idiocy and pauperism.

In 1870 we had in the United States 98,484 insane persons, idiots, blind persons and deaf mutes. In 1880 this number swelled to 251,698. To go back further in 1850, we had of this class of persons 50,994. While, therefore, the population has doubled in 30 years, the number of insane, idiots and mutes has quintupled. Or to make the case stronger, the increase of population has been in the ten years ending in 1880, about 30 per cent.; the increase of the defective class has been 155 per cent. In 1870 there were 2554 defective persons in a million, now there are 5018. As we have said this comparison may not be correct, nor does Mr. Wines, the compiler, think so—simply because more efficient means were used in 1880 to take the census than in 1870, and so the enumeration of the latter year may not be correct. Still the fact remains that there has been a great increase of the defective class of our population, if not so startling as that shown, still sufficiently so to make us think about our social life and its conditions. Going into details, Mr. Wines points out that insanity is more frequent among women, and idiocity, blindness and deafness among men; that idiocy is more common among the negro population than insanity; that this class and foreigners are more liable to blindness than to deafness, and last that the tendency to insanity is found most marked among our foreign population. "It is startling to know," says Mr. Wines, "that of 50,000,000 inhabitants over 400,000 are either insane, idiots, deaf mutes, or blind, or are inmates of prisons, reformatories, or poorhouses. If to these we add the outdoor poor and the inmates of private charitable institutions, the number will swell to nearly or quite 500,000 or 1 per cent. of the total population. We cannot begin too soon or prosecute too vigorously the inquiry into the causes of the prevalence of these evils, which are like a canker at the heart of all our prosperity."

It is customary to represent all Germany as so very partial to beer and light wines as to be almost free from the curse of distilled spirits; but a recent statement in regard to Prussia shows that the annual consumption of whisky and brandy in that kingdom is something over $55,000,000, or fully $2 a year for each inhabitant. The total expenditures of the people of Prussia for distilled and malt liquors and tobacco are about $270,000,000, or nearly $10 for each man, woman and child in the country. There is a beer shop to every 161 persons and a tobacco shop to every 125. The quantity of malt, spirituous and vinous liquors consumed last year in Prussia was 650,496,762 gallons, or something over 25 gallons a head.

Government clerks at Washington are raising an outcry because the new legislative appropriation bill requires them to work eight hours a day and restricts them to thirty days of absence in each year. This protest is injudicious, since it exhibits to the country the easy life which the great army of department clerks enjoy. There are hundreds of thousands of competent persons who would gladly do the same work for less pay, provided always they could be assured of immunity from robbery by "assessors" of the Jay Hubbell stamp. Most people are obliged to work more than eight hours a day and eleven months in the year.

It is an error to suppose that nearly all the immigrants who land at our eastern ports are destined for the west. Of the 476,086 who arrived at New York during 1882 no less than 166,824 gave the state of New York as their final destination, though doubtless many of these will make their way towards the west in time. Nearly 50,000 gave Pennsylvania as their destination. There is no indication that the south has gained much in population by foreign immigration or is likely to do so for some time to come. Large numbers from the north are, however, constantly going into the southern states.

The infamous outrage perpetrated by a filthy creature named Vandersal in putting into circulation the coinage of his own beastly imagination concerning a highly honored lady of Forest Grove, it is gratifying to observe is regarded by a Washington county jury in its true light. By suing others for libel Vandersal has brought upon himself with crushing weight the condemnation he so richly deserves. This foul satyr, who wore the garb of a minister of purity and peace, can never more do harm to any reputation.

POWDER EXPLOSION.

Ten Chinese Severely Burned in East Portland while at Work with Powder—One Probably Fatally.

[illegible] East Portland [illegible] furnishes the following particulars of an explosion yesterday. The locality of the accident was at a point on the high embankment nearly opposite the [illegible] ferry landing, and close to the [illegible] of a shaft, that is one of several in this vicinity which have been sunk for blasting purposes. A. McKenzie has charge of the blasting operations and has a gang of Chinamen working under him. At the time of the explosion Mr. McKenzie and a Chinaman were at the bottom of the shaft mentioned preparing the powder for a blast to take place between 12 and 1 o'clock. There are 250 pounds of black powder used in each pit, being in [illegible] cans containing 25 pounds each, which are opened and lowered by the [illegible] men by means of a windlass. In the shaft referred to 200 pounds had been sent down, another 25 pounds was being lowered, and the last can necessary to complete the full complement was being opened when it exploded with a loud report and fearful results. The cans are cut open with a hatchet, which is the usual means employed for this purpose and generally considered safe. In this instance it is thought some flinty substance was on the can, which when struck by the hatchet produced fire, from which the powder ignited. There were nine Chinamen employed near the mouth of the shaft when one of their number struck the blow. Three of them were blown down the embankment, three others were blown a distance of at least one hundred feet in the opposite direction, the remaining three were blown high in the air and alighted near the shaft.

It is strange that none of them were killed outright. One of those who went down the embankment was the "bookman," or time keeper, named Lun Low, who not only did not lose his consciousness, but also retained his presence of mind. With his hands and face fearfully burned, and his clothing all on fire, he hastened to his feet and started to run to the river. J. W. Whipple, who is engaged on construction work, and N. Miller, the engineer of the steam shovel, who observed this circumstance, started after him and were instrumental in frustrating his design by inducing him to roll himself in an adjacent mud puddle. The gentleman named rendered him what assistance was possible. He exhibited much fortitude, saying only "Me heap bad; send for doctor." This man is spoken of as being very intelligent, with a fair knowledge of English, and was a favorite with the white men among whom he worked. The place where the men alighted who were blown the farthest distance, was examined by the reporter, who found the ground besmeared and bespattered with blood to a considerable extent and also found the charred skin of a hand, except the front part, which was complete with all the nails intact. This horrifying memento of the calamity Harry Webber, of this city, who was present, has preserved. The charred remains of clothing which were cut from the victims bestrew the location of the calamity. The Chinaman in charge of the windlass having been blown from his position, the powder that was being lowered by him dropped to the bottom of the shaft, and would have killed the men in it had they not dexterously dodged into a drift on one side of the shaft. Mr. McKenzie seized the rope, intending to climb out of the shaft "hand over hand," but the rope broke with his weight, having been burnt at the upper end. It was first feared Mr. McKenzie had been killed, but Mr. Miller, above referred to, set these fears at rest by discovering him in the shaft; and finding him without means to ascend, furnished him a new rope to the windlass, by which both he and the Chinaman were enabled to escape from their temporary prison, forty feet below the surface. Other Chinamen employed in the vicinity attended their unfortunate countrymen and conveyed them to their camps.

EXTENT OF THE INJURIES.

Immediately after the accident, Dr. I. E. Cohn, chief surgeon of the O. R. & N. Co., was telegraphed to, and he left for the scene, taking conveyances for the wounded men. Only five were seriously injured and they were taken to St. Vincent's hospital. Examination showed that no bones were broken, but all were terribly burned about the face, hands and legs. Some have lost more than half the covering of skin. The injuries were dressed by Dr. Cohn, assisted by Dr. Maston. One of the injured has not rallied from the shock, and it is likely he will die.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

The Committee on Commerce Radically Opposes the President's Policy.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Washington, Feb. 22.—The report of the committee on commerce, accompanying the river and harbor bill, referred to in these dispatches yesterday, [illegible] that republican newspapers of the great [illegible] have raised a hue and cry [illegible], and against those by whose [illegible] it had passed, [illegible] the attack with every possible [illegible] misrepresentation [illegible] in their [illegible] own interest. At the assembling of congress the president, in his annual message, took occasion to again [illegible] appropriations for rivers and harbors, evidently [illegible] by deceptive [illegible]. The advance [illegible] expressed the hope that [illegible] would be deemed necessary during the present [illegible]. He failed also to furnish the secretary of the treasury the usual statement of estimates of appropriations required for the service for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1884, as required to be transmitted to congress, in the book of estimates, by provision of law. This left your committee in the dark. Then they report a resolution, which was adopted by the house, calling on the secretary of war for reports and estimates of the engineer's department, to which the secretary of war returned answer January 1, 1883. Upon receiving the reports and estimates of engineers, your committee proposed to examine, and found that a number of important river and harbor works would not have a dollar left at the expiration of the present fiscal year; that a failure on the part of congress to make appropriations for the coming fiscal year ending June 30, 1884, would inevitably result in great loss to the government, and that such a failure would be equivalent to throwing away vast sums already expended in the interest of commerce, and rendering worthless many uncompleted improvements as well as subjecting many completed works to great damage. Notwithstanding the report of adverse views by the president, your committee are compelled to present to the house a river and harbor bill, as not otherwise would be a culpable and serious omission of duty.

Your committee have endeavored to exclude from such bill all items not justified in all respects by the absolute interests of general commerce, and the ease and security of navigation. The report further goes on to criticise the action of the president and secretary of war in the following language, as to the exercise of the veto on the last river and harbor bill: While it is undeniable that he should never lightly or unnecessarily exercise that right, as to river and harbor appropriation, the president [illegible] until the secretary of war either has the power to withhold from expenditure any or all of them, or he has not the power to withhold at all. If the president has not the power to so withhold, then he has failed in his obligation to carry out the law, and overstepped the bounds prescribed by the constitution. If he has power to so withhold, then the veto was quite unnecessary. A letter from the secretary of war gives a list of 31 of such appropriations in the act of 1882, which the secretary says have been temporarily withheld by him, at the suggestion of the president. Assumption of power temporarily withheld carries with it the implication of power to permanently withhold; but whether it is the duty of the executive simply to execute the law, except in cases where it is absolutely impracticable, or palpably unconstitutional, and in that event to so report to congress is a matter upon which this committee is not in duty bound at this time to express an opinion. The committee then goes into a very lengthy argument in defense of the various items appropriated by the bill.

THE MECHANICS' FAIR.—At the stockholders' meeting of the Portland Mechanics' Fair association, held on the 13th inst., the secretary submitted his annual report. From it it appeared that the association is now free from debt, a prospect now that was highly appreciated by the stockholders, as the investment has been anything but a paying one to them, they never having received but one dividend of ten per cent since the organization of the society, over four years ago, making an average of less than two and one-half per cent per annum. The by-laws were amended so that the annual meeting of the society, at which the next board of directors will be elected, will not take place until the third Tuesday in January, 1884. This was done in order to allow the new board more time to make the necessary preparations for holding the annual exhibition. It is to be regretted that this society, which was not formed for the purpose of making money, but for the encouragement of home industries and the development of the interests of the city, has not received the support and cooperation of the manufacturers and business men, to which it was so justly entitled, and it is to be hoped that the endeavors of the directors will in future be more successful in enlisting the mutual efforts of all who have the prosperity of our city at heart.

HIGH SCHOOL EXERCISES.—The second in the course of weekly exercises of the High school was held yesterday afternoon in their assembly room. The programme was arranged with usual good taste, and was also very interesting. Some of the essays merit special mention. Miss Hattie Jay's essay "Washington," and Milton Goldsmith's essay "Washington's Farewell Address" would not have been inappropriate in the commemorative exercises of the [illegible]. Miss Maggie Groves' essay "Valentine's Day" suggested some of the ridiculous of the 14th of February. Miss Anna Knox' essay "Progression of Literature and Art in America" was worthy of much [illegible]. Miss Mamie Gantenbein's recitation [illegible] was very interesting [illegible] Gussie Holman's essay "Central School Building" [illegible] recollections of school days passed [illegible] roof, and closed by saying, whatever use it may be put to, it can never surpass its past use. The music consisted mainly of national airs, and [illegible] with a will that the High school has become established. No one listens to these essays and recitations without giving away to the conviction that this is a representation of Portland's future [illegible] and writers.

HELD TO ANSWER.—The examination of McCoy, James and Smith, on a charge of outraging Mary [illegible], was continued in the police court yesterday. [illegible] put on the stand and her cross-examination [illegible] by Mr. Gleason. She could not recall anything in relation to the affair subsequent to the time when she took the first drink of whisky, and [illegible] pressed for an answer to questions [illegible] Mr. Mulkey objected to her being again [illegible] the stand, and a somewhat heated discussion [illegible] in regard to the matter. The court [illegible] that he was prepared to pass upon the [illegible] there was no need of any further [illegible] of the girl. Mr. Gleason stated that he [illegible] to produce any witnesses. The court [illegible] considered the testimony quite sufficient [illegible] James and McCoy both of the [illegible] and the outrage on Mary [illegible] also to prove Smith an accessory after [illegible], therefore, ordered them to be held [illegible] before the grand jury. The bail of McCoy [illegible] was fixed at $1000 on each charge, and [illegible] of $800. The prisoners were sent to [illegible] jail.

[illegible] PARTNER.—About four o'clock th[illegible] discovery was made that a room at the [illegible] hotel occupied by Samuel K. [illegible] Burgess, alias Disbro, had been robbed. The [illegible] of both occupants were found [illegible], the pockets empty. Willis lost $110 [illegible] while Burgess claimed to have lost [illegible]. The case was given to Detective Jim Barry, [illegible] and arrested the thief, [illegible] and works in Sherlock's [illegible] is a carpenter. They arrived [illegible] ago and roomed together at [illegible] inquiry Barry learned that [illegible] a package to Mr. Lawrence, book-[illegible], who placed it in the safe. THURSDAY NIGHT'S HOMICIDE.

The Story of Wheeler Corroborated by One Witness—Phalon is the Man who Quarrelled with Him—Coroner's Verdict.

Yesterday Coroner [illegible] held an inquest on the body of Fred Swarz, who was killed in the Palace theater bar on Thursday night. The witnesses were [illegible] Tyler, who was the principal one, [illegible] the proprietor, and Tony Mettie, barkeeper of the theater, Dr. W. H. Saylor, Mrs. Swarz, wife of the deceased, and Dan Owens, a [illegible]. Tyler was the only witness who threw any light on the affair. His testimony in substance was as follows: I was standing at the bar talking to Tony Mettie and Swarz. Phalon came down from upstairs and went into the water closet. As soon as he came out he started to return upstairs, and had his hand on the door knob when Wheeler came in and started up. Phalon said something to Wheeler which I thought was a joke, and several words passed between them. Pretty soon Phalon said to him "[illegible] you take me for a [illegible]," and afterward repeated the remark, and at the same time struck Wheeler. They struck at each other several times, when Phalon seized a chair. Swarz ran over to Fred [illegible] to quiet him. I told him to go away. Wheeler pulled his revolver. Phalon struck at him with the chair and hit his hand. At this moment the pistol was discharged and the ball hit Swarz. I ran over to Wheeler, caught his arm, and threw his hand up. Phalon struck him again with the chair, and I received part of the blow on my arm. I wrenched the revolver from Wheeler's hand and put it in my hip pocket. Wheeler then started for the door. Swarz, who had [illegible] to the bar, drew his revolver, said [illegible] fired two shots as Wheeler turned to the front [illegible]. He [illegible] the door. I went [illegible] picked him up. A crowd then ran into the barroom from the street and the theater. I picked Swarz' revolver up and laid it on the sideboard behind the bar. The only witnesses to the shooting were Phalon, Wheeler and myself."

Tony Mettie testified to the first part of the quarrel about as Tyler did, but he left the room to go up stairs for one of the proprietors before the shooting began [illegible] after it was over.

[illegible] testified to having [illegible] the same as Swarz was shooting in the direction of the front door.

Dr. Saylor testified as to the nature of the wound.

Mrs. Swarz testified that the deceased was her husband, and that he was 25 years old.

Dan Owens gave a very incoherent account of the affair.

The jury returned a verdict that Swarz came to his death by a gunshot wound at the hands of Frank Wheeler.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION.

In the police court yesterday afternoon, Wheeler was arraigned on a charge of willfully and maliciously killing Fred Swarz. C. H. Hewitt appeared for him and asked that the case go over till Monday, but finally consented to have it heard to-day.

PHALON RELEASED.

After Wheeler's statement and the evidence before the coroner, Phalon was released from custody, and gave bonds to appear as a witness. From all accounts he was inflamed with liquor and very quarrelsome. After his arrest he sank into a stupor, from which it was impossible to rouse him. Yesterday morning, when he had partly recovered consciousness, he could not remember a single incident of his quarrel the night before, nor of the shooting.

WAS THERE COLLUSION?

Tyler according to his own testimony, took a revolver from a man whom he saw commit homicide and kept it. When he saw an innocent man arrested, he did not interpose with the truth. According to Wheeler's story, Tyler met him an hour afterward and they were together more than an hour. Wheeler then surrenders himself, having avoided the police, and makes a statement. Tyler a few hours later makes a statement which dovetails nicely with Wheeler's.

THOSE SMALLPOX CHARGES.

Without carefully looking into the facts, certain parties at Walla Walla have charged that Chief of Police Lappeus recently sent to that city, or allowed to go there, a man who had the smallpox. This story has been widely circulated, and with it an addendum that the afflicted man had been examined in this city by Dr. Wells, and that he (Wells) had assured Lappeus that the disease was smallpox. So out of keeping is this story with the character of Chief Lappeus and his conduct in former cases that THE OREGONIAN doubted it, but to learn the truth a reporter called yesterday upon Dr. Wells, who said: "A man was brought to my office by Mr. Gorman, of the Norton house, who wanted to know what was the matter with him. I made an examination of him—that is, I placed my fingers on his face and thinks I had him open his shirt. I thought he had smallpox, and telephoned to Chief Lappeus that there was a man in my office I believed had the smallpox. I did not wish to have anything to do with attending him if he had that disease, as I had a family practice. Captain Grützmacher came to my office and took the man away. I did not state definitely that he had or had not the smallpox; did not feel called on to do so. I do not profess to be a great expert in smallpox matters. I did not see the man his name. Captain Grützmacher said Chief Lappeus had had great experience in smallpox, and took the man away to be examined by him."

This man, who gave his name as Allen, was stripped and thoroughly examined by Chief Lappeus, who asserts that he did not have the smallpox. He was allowed to depart, and it is not known where he went. The man who carried the smallpox to Walla Walla gave his name as Hale, and afterward as Thompson, and it appears his name really was Hale. There is no proof that he was the person examined by Chief Lappeus, and it is not at all likely he was.

It is well known that there is no man here who has had so much experience in smallpox matters as Chief Lappeus, and he is the only man in authority here who has dealt with that disease in a fearless and efficient way.

The outcry here emanates solely from a political ring who are laying pipes for the June election, and who desire to oust Chief Lappeus and get the control of the police force into their own hands. The whole business is so transparent that every citizen sees through it.

It is much to be regretted that any smallpox patient went into the upper country, and no one would have used any more endeavor to prevent it than Mr. Lappeus; and persons up there who complain of his action have simply been misled as to the facts.

POLICE COURT.

The change in the weather seems to have had a bad effect on the criminal class. During the cold spell the city jail was almost empty, and now there are over thirty prisoners confined there. The dock at the police court was filled yesterday. Lilly Harris was charged by Dolly Adams with calling her an old murderess and other opprobrious epithets. Dolly produced as evidence a person named Baslam, who looked much like a descendant of Baalam's companion, who swore to the charge. Miss Harris denied it and said Dolly was a "[illegible]" she would not speak to or recognize on the street. The case was passed till to-day.

The case of a Chinaman who had been arrested on complaint of Street Commissioner Braden, charging him with throwing a stinking pig's head and a lot of rotten potatoes into the street in front of his place of business on Alder street between First and Second, was taken under advisement. Judging from the amount of filth which was being carted away from that place yesterday afternoon Braden should receive 10 days for not making the complaint sooner.

George Williams, charged with the larceny of an overcoat from a store, was asked if he wanted an examination. "Certainly," he replied, "I am not guilty and wish to have an examination." "Do you want it now?" asked Mr. Mulkey. "Certainly," was the reply. "Then I move it be put off till to-morrow," said Mr. Mulkey, and it was put off.

Ah Moon, a very mean looking Chinaman, was arraigned on a charge of assault with intent to kill one Kim Lung. It appears that Ah and him had a quarrel about washing some rice, and Ah seized a knife and stabbed Kim in the breast and arm. Capt. Grützmacher, who happened to be passing, went in and found Moon hid away in the garret. He objected to being arrested and screamed and caught hold of everything in his way, and acted like a crazy man. He pleaded not guilty and the case was continued till to-day.

CONVICTED SLANDERER.

The Jury in the Vandersal Case Return a Verdict for Defendants.

"The Law of Christ, as Recorded in Matthew," Expounded by Plaintiff.

Judge Williams' Severe Cross-Examination of Vandersal.

HILLSBORO, Feb. 23.

The great libel suit of S. S. Vandersal against the Rev. Wm. Roberts, of Forest Grove, and Messrs. Luce & Jones, proprietors of the Hillsboro Independent, which has been on trial for the past five days, and has excited the good people of Washington county to no small extent, was concluded to-day. The court held a session last evening, which was very interesting, the plaintiff, Vandersal, taking the stand and, after a few preliminary statements, being subjected to a rigid cross-examination by Judge Williams.

The legal sparring, which occupied much of the afternoon, was resumed in the evening.

Vandersal recalled: Said the statement presented in court was the same as he read before the trustees. The charges against Prof. Ferrin were given orally. Mrs. Marsh said she had invited others as she had me. I said nothing but what she said to me. I [illegible] they must draw their own inferences from what I intended. I put my charges in writing at request of Dr. Atkinson. I first talked with my wife about this matter after Ferrin made the attack upon me, in reply to Prof. Lyman.

Question here arose whether plaintiff could testify to such statement after having denied in his reply that he ever made them. Court ruled that the question was to show malice.

Witness said he talked with Ferrin on church interests and then approached the subject of Mrs. Marsh. I told him what Mrs. Marsh said to me. This was said under a pledge of secrecy. Had a similar conversation subsequently. Never said there was something startling about to take place. Did not say I was as satisfied that Mrs. Marsh and Prof. Ferrin was intimate as though I had seen it.

After lengthy argument the evidence concerning Vandersal's quarrel with Ferrin was ruled out.

Witness told of the conversation with Mrs. Shelton. He said it was only after much urging that he told her about Mrs. Marsh. Did not use the words Mrs. Shelton testified to. Heard Mrs. Marsh's testimony.

An objection was again made to proving statements he denied making.

The court ruled the evidence was admissible, inasmuch as defendants had introduced testimony to disprove Vandersal's statements.

Witness then denied the statements made by Mrs. Marsh and several other witnesses in toto.

Following this was some very interesting testimony, which through the courtesy of J. R. Baldwin, official stenographer, THE OREGONIAN is enabled to publish in full:

State whether or not you objected to the jurisdiction of the church.

I did.

What were the grounds of objection?

For not complying with the law of the church, which is the law of Christ as recorded in Matthew.

From your knowledge of the rules and usages of the church state whether you could be put upon your trial without these things being done?

Objection by Tongue.

Williams desired some one to tell what this law of Christ is.

Thayer suggested the court would probably take judicial notice of the law of Christ.

Witness—I fail to comprehend your meaning. Do you mean the trial of the church?

Counsel—Yes.

Witness—I say I could not be put on trial without a compliance of the law.

What is that law?

It is the law of Christ as recorded in Matthew.

Thayer—I know, but not one of us know it. What does it specify.

Handley said as a matter of fact he supposed the court takes judicial knowledge of the scriptures and what is laid down in Matthew, 18, 15-18.

The court—I do not think I can take judicial knowledge of the scriptures.

Thayer—Did you hear the testimony of Mrs. Marsh to-day?

Witness—I did.

What do you say upon that point?

Objection made and overruled.

I say my statement about her is true.

Thayer—I refer to the letters and conversation between you and Mrs. Marsh.

Witness—I say my statement is true emphatically. State what Mrs. Marsh's general reputation was for virtue and chastity.

It was good.

Witness then attempted to qualify his statement with rumors he had heard, but was stopped by the court.

Cross-examination—Williams—You wish to be understood by the jury as saying that all the statements Mrs. Marsh made to-day upon the stand were false?

Witness—I do.

You stated that somebody at this meeting of the board of trustees pledged to you that the proceedings should be secret. Who made that pledge?

Dr. Atkinson.

You stated that you told Mr. Smith that you had heard that Mrs. Marsh had said that you loved her with all that love implied. Who told you that?

D. C. Miller.

Did D. C. Miller tell you that Mrs. Marsh told him so?

He said his wife told him.

And that is the only time you ever heard it?

That is the only time I ever heard it.

Prior to this summons to you to appear before the church, were you not called upon by church brethren and requested to adjust the matter without difficulty, according to the law of Matthew?

No, sir.

Did Mr. Hinman and Mr. Walker call upon you for that purpose?

They were not the proper persons.

Who were the proper persons?

The persons who said I had accused them.

Do you claim that it was the duty of Mrs. Marsh and Prof. Marsh and Prof. Ferrin, after you had made that statement concerning them to the board of trustees, to come to you to adjust the matter before they made complaint to the church?

I do.

That is what you mean by the law of Christ, is it?

Yes.

Did Prof. Marsh accompany any gentleman to you with the view of having the matter adjusted without any publicity or difficulty?

He did, but their main object was to get hold of that statement or to have me make the statement before the church.

Prior to the commencement of any proceedings in the church against you, were you not called upon by a committee of the church members, who proposed to adjust the matter without any publicity or difficulty?

They asked me to retract my statements.

Didn't they ask you to withdraw these charges?

I didn't know about the publicity of it, but I refused to retract.

When you refused then they called upon you for a copy of that paper?

No, sir, it was before.

So you refused?

I only wrote that statement at the direction of Dr. Atkinson. He asked me to do it. It was a private matter. I wrote it to present to the board of trustees and never expected to say any more about it.

Now what was your object in presenting that paper before the board of trustees?

I was pastor of the church, and this matter came up in such a way from the almost any one and the conversation of Mrs. Marsh that I felt it my duty as a christian minister to get advice upon the matter and have it considered.

Didn't you make that statement to the board of trustees to affect the standing and character of the men and woman charged therein?

I did not.

You didn't suppose it would have any effect upon these people?

I left that with the board of trustees.

When you left that with the board of trustees charging Mrs. Marsh with a desire to have illicit connection with you, didn't you believe it would affect her character?

I believed it might do.

Did you expect that the board would take that course with Mrs. Marsh, of discharging her from the school, without any notice to her?

Well, that was a matter provided for their consideration.

Now, as a christian gentleman, do you think it would have been right for that board of trustees, without giving her any notice, to remove her as a teacher?

Such things have been done.

Question repeated.

Well, I think she would have been removed and the matter taken into the church and settled in a quiet way.

You didn't suppose when you presented that paper to the board of trustees that Mrs. Marsh and the gentlemen named in the paper would have any information upon the subject?

Well, I had a little talk with Dr. Atkinson upon that subject. He advised it on the matter that affected the educational interests of that school, and that the church was a distinct institution, and it must be settled according to the law of Christ, as recorded in Matthew.

You wish to have the jury understand, do you, that a portion of the statements of Prof. Lyman is not genuine [illegible] false?

I do.

You wish to have the jury understand that a portion of the statements made by Mrs. Smith to-day were false?

I do.

You wish to have the jury understand that a portion of the statements made by Mrs. Shelton here are false?

I do, sir.

Recross-examination—Ah [illegible] state that all Mrs. Marsh's statements were [illegible] what did [illegible]

[illegible]

witnesses by whom he proposed to show that rumors now in circulation against the character of Mrs. Marsh were true, but the court's ruling decided that such evidence was mere gossip and not admissible. "He had yet to learn," he said, "that there was anything improper in Prof. Ferrin, a single gentleman, and Mrs. Marsh, a single lady, walking arm in arm through the streets of Forest Grove or along the various pathways in the woods surrounding that village."

Mr. Handley made the opening argument to the jury for the plaintiff. He was followed by Messrs. R. Kelly and Geo. H. Williams for the defense, and ex-Gov. Thayer closed for the plaintiff.

The judge's charge was short and concise, and the jury then retired. After a short deliberation they returned a verdict for the defendants. This action completely vindicates the good name of Mrs. Marsh, and says there is nothing libelous in the article written by Rev. Mr. Roberts, calling Vandersal a convicted slanderer.

SATURDAY MORNING, FEB. 24, 1883.

ARE THE CHILDREN HOME

Each day, when the glory of sunset
Fades in the western sky,
And the wee ones, tired of playing,
Go tripping lightly by,
I steal away from my husband,
Asleep in the easy chair,
And watch from the open doorway
Their faces fresh and fair.

Alone in the dear old homestead
That once was full of life,
Full of girlish laughter,
Echoing with boyish strife,
We, too, are waiting together,
And oft as the shadows come,
With tremulous voice he calls me:
"It is night, are the children home?"

"Yes, love," I answer him gently,
"They're all home long ago;"
And I sing in my quivering treble
A song so soft and low,
Till the old man drops to slumber,
With his head upon his hand,
And I tell to myself the number
At home in the better land.

Home, where never a sorrow
Shall dim their eyes with tears,
Where the smile of God is on them
Through all the summer years.
I know, yet my arms are empty,
That fondly folded seven,
And the mother heart within me
Is almost starved for heaven.

Sometimes in the dusk of evening
I only shut my eyes,
And the children are all about me,
A vision from the skies;
The babes whose dimpled fingers
Lost the way to my breast,
And the beautiful ones, the angels,
Passed to the world of the blest.

A breath, and the vision is lifted
Away on the wings of light,
And again we two are together,
All alone in the night.
They tell me his mind is failing,
But I smile at the idle fears;
He is only back with the children,
In the dear and peaceful years.

And still as the summer sunset
Fades away in the west,
And the wee ones, tired of playing,
Go trooping home to rest,
My husband calls from his corner,
"Say, love, have the children come?"
And I answer with eyes uplifted,
"Yes, dear, they are all at home."

AFTERNOON DISPATCHES

Disastrous Ride.

Boston, Feb. 23.—At Milford to-day thirteen children were thrown from a double runner which struck a tree. Nearly all were picked up unconscious. The names of the maimed are, Mamie Murray, leg broken, amputation necessary; Edward Hogan, leg broken, internally injured; Lewis Crane and Willie Hickey, badly bruised and internally injured; Lucy Gleason, severe injuries on legs and back; Mary Doherty, badly injured on the face and head.

Dry Ground Reappearing.

Cincinnati, Feb. 23.—The river is declining at the rate of an inch an hour and is low enough to allow the steamers to use the public [illegible] inundated districts which are covered with wagons and filled with busy men. There seems no ground for alarm from the accumulation of filth and rubbish as the relief committee keep streets cleaned as fast as the water recedes.

The additional relief fund to-day amounts to [illegible] making a total of $14,600.

Cairo, Ill., Feb. 23.—At midnight the river stood at fifty feet ten inches, and stationary. Levees still intact.

Aged Priest Dead.

St. Louis, Feb 23.—Father Steyer died here to-day. He was the oldest Catholic priest in the United States and one of the oldest in the world, being over 90 years old. He was the first priest to celebrate the holy sacrifice in [illegible].

Chapter of Fatalities.

San Francisco, Feb. 23.—The loss of the [illegible] C. L. Taylor, of Cape Flattery, a [illegible] suggests a chapter of coincidences [illegible] fatalities extending over a protracted period worth recording. On the 9th of [illegible], the bark Rainier, Capt. Wolfe, and the barkentine C. L. Taylor, Capt. Bergman, [illegible] collision a few miles north of Cape [illegible]. Both vessels were seriously damaged [illegible] to return to the sound for repairs. [illegible] Taylor was at once libeled for $5000 [illegible] of the Rainier, and a counter suit was [illegible] on the part of the C. L. Taylor, [illegible] other craft. The cases went to the [illegible] court of the territory and were finally [illegible] in this city, within the past week, the [illegible] Taylor getting an award of $500, each [illegible] to pay their own costs. In the meantime the Rainier was lost at sea a year and [illegible] Capt. Wolfe being killed on her [illegible] spanker boom, and the crew escaping [illegible] long boat. The C. L. Taylor sailed [illegible] until the present week, when she, too, [illegible] near the place where the collision occurred. [illegible] Capt. Bergman, still in command, [illegible] as to lose both wife and [illegible].

A Burglar's Diversion.

San Francisco, Feb. 22.—James Neary, a [illegible], broke a show window of a [illegible] store on Kearney street this [illegible] a dummy roll of twenty [illegible] started and ran, followed by a [illegible] Montgomery street, [illegible] at his pursuers, and [illegible] two blocks farther, fired a second [illegible] up by a special officer. [illegible] shots went wide of [illegible] was hurt.

A Rough Voyage.

Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Peters leave here to-morrow morning for the eastern states. They leave Portland Tuesday, remaining in San Francisco several weeks and probably making several short visits while en route across the continent. Before their return they will probably visit Europe. They expect to be absent six or eight months.

Per order President Johnson the university students assembled in the auditorium yesterday afternoon. Besides general remarks on discipline, etc., four students were publicly reprimanded for using intoxicating liquors on the evening of the 8th inst., while one student was expelled, this being his second offense. The faculty are, and always have been, determined that no person attending this institution shall frequent saloons, drink or engage in card playing. Some little allowance was made, however to the students arraigned for the time at which the rule was violated, it being the evening of our last fire. In the intense excitement which followed the speedy extinguishment of the flames, some of our temperate citizens and young students—the saloons having thrown open their doors—allowed themselves to be carried in by the crowd, and before they were aware, found themselves presenting a not too respectable appearance.

ANDERSEN SENTENCED

To Suffer Death by Hanging, Friday, April 13.

An Appeal to the Supreme Court to be Taken.

The Grounds upon which this Appeal is Based.

[illegible] the state circuit court yesterday [illegible] the first case called was that [illegible] Andersen, convicted [illegible] first degree. Judge Stott [illegible] in the matter of a new trial [illegible]. There were two points raised by the [illegible] for a new trial. One was [illegible] the prosecuting attorney [illegible] the trial, and the other was that there was no evidence presented at the trial of deliberation and premeditation. In regard to the first point the judge [illegible] as to whether the [illegible] were proper or not, but he did not think that prejudiced the case of the defendant, as the jury was [illegible] instructed not to let the fact that the defendant did not testify in this case have any [illegible] their conclusions as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

As to the other point the court reviewed the testimony at some length on the question of premeditation and deliberation. The provisions of the code were stated, which says that there should be some evidence of lying in wait, of poisoning, or something to show forethought and design to kill. The question here was as to evidence inferred or direct on this point. If they could show positively the lying in wait that would be direct proof. But the lying in wait may be inferred from the circumstances. No particular time need elapse between the forming of the design to kill and the killing for premeditation to be shown. The evidence in this case showed that whoever fired the shot must have been behind the deceased. There was no proof of any altercation. There was no sign of any provocation or altercation to cause a sudden impulse to kill formed on the instant and as a consequence of the provocation. If one plans to kill another for his money and formed that plan at the time the opportunity presented itself, it would be as much deliberate as if formed in the absence of the deceased. The manner the defendant came away from the scene of the murder was detailed. Captain Whitcomb saw the flashes and heard the reports of the gun. Saw a man rush away from the spot with two guns, dropping one in his hurry to get down the bank and picking it up hastily. The captain saw that in his hurry to row across the stream he was heading right in the way of the steamer where he would have been swamped, and the captain motioned him to row astern, which he did. Take the defendant's immediate flight, his possession of money, the watch of the deceased, and it shows the motive. The judge says he cannot escape the conclusion that this defendant fired that shot behind without altercation. There is not some evidence, but, in the judgment of the court sufficient evidence to justify the jury in the conclusion they arrived at. The motion for a new trial is denied.

THE SENTENCE.

The prisoner was then directed by the court to stand up. He promptly responded by rising. The judge said:

"Have you anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon you?"

Andersen responded in somewhat low tones, and in quite imperfect English, his language being broken by the Norwegian dialect, as follows:

"I was thinking to have a good deal to say, but I do not see there is any use in doing so."

The court—"You have full liberty to make any statement you may desire."

Andersen—"I have not had justice in this court. So far as I have seen, there has been a determination to hang me, whether or no. It is no use to look for justice here, and I do not expect it."

The prisoner started to say something more, but evidently concluded to stop, and stood for some moments, as if waiting to collect his thoughts. The silence, which became very painful, was at last broken by Judge Stott, who pronounced the following sentence:

"The judgment of the court is, that you be taken from this place by the sheriff and kept in close confinement until the 13th day of April next, and on that day, between the hours of 9 and 2 o'clock, you will be taken to a place suitably prepared and there hanged by the neck until you are dead. And may the Lord have mercy upon your soul."

As the last words of the sentence were pronounced there was a visible tremor in the voice of the judge, indicating deep emotion. But it was far different with the prisoner. His countenance changed from the sullen, dogged indifference assumed while making his speech to a broad, sarcastic smile which was so entirely out of keeping with the occasion as to shock many who were present. He started to move away as if he were through and desired to get away from the scene, but was told to be seated. He sat with a sullen air.

Mr. Chapman, of counsel for Andersen, asked for fifteen days in which to prepare his exceptions and present his appeal to the supreme court, which was granted.

The prisoner was then taken to his cell and the crowd dispersed.

GROUNDS FOR THE APPEAL.

It is claimed by the defendant's attorneys, notwithstanding Judge Stott's approval of the verdict, that not only is there no evidence whatever preceding the supposed occurrence which at all indicates either malice or "premeditation and deliberation," but that everything preceding the supposed occurrence cannot only be solved upon the theory of the innocence of the defendant but that there is nothing at all in the preceding occurrences that indicates anything but the best of feelings between the parties. Besides this it is claimed that the nature of the wound makes it more probable, from all the circumstances, that, even if the shot was from a gun in the hands of the defendant, that it was accidental than that it was intentionally done. They claim that the shot was absolutely accidental, one way or another; either that it was entirely unintentional and accidental or else, even if there had been an intention previously formed to kill, that it was accidental that the shot did not entirely miss the victim, and that as there were two shots fired according to Capt. Whitcomb's testimony, it is improbable, if there had been an intention to kill, but that both shots would have had some effect on the victim, and that it could not have been possible that one shot should have entirely missed the victim and the other so nearly have missed him, when it was from a previously formed intention to kill (the shot that killed entered behind and below the right ear and came out at the right eye, and passed entirely below the brain and did not touch it). If two shots were fired as Captain Whitcomb says, which one of the shots did the killing, say the defendant's attorneys, for the evidence showed clearly that but one shot took effect or at all touched the body. If there was an intention to kill, say the attorneys, then both shots were intentionally fired at the victim, and that when the first shot was fired, if it had not been in the presence of game, that when the said first shot was fired, that the deceased would most undoubtedly have turned his face toward the place of the shooting, and in such event would have received the second shot necessarily in the face or front, which he did not. And that if the first shot was the fatal one, then it would be preposterous to suppose that a second shot could be fired at so short range and utterly fail to take effect. Then the attorneys claim as a proposition of law and logic combined, that it is utterly impossible to deduce the necessary conclusion of malice or of "premeditation and deliberation" to constitute murder in the first degree, from the conduct of the defendant subsequent to the supposed occurrence, for the reason that nothing whatever exists in the subsequent conduct to show they were both the preceding intention and the subsequent conduct of one and the same plan and design. They claim that this is absolutely necessary in order to draw any conclusion or reference of previous intention. But they say that upon the contrary that the defendant's subsequent conduct with the deceased's property shows that he was acting without any plan at all, either previous, designed or otherwise, and that therefore it is utterly impossible to deduce a previous design where there is an utter lack of design at the time or at all. They say that all subsequent acts of the defendant show no previous plan or design whatever and can just as well be accounted for upon the theory of possible accident as upon that of guilt, and that the evidence adduced is utterly lacking of any evidence of malice at all. That taking the two together a presumption of guilt cannot be raised therefrom. This is a case of circumstantial evidence, it is said, and it is claimed that it is immaterial what the subsequent conduct of the defendant was in other respects; that it failed to show previous design in any way, it was utterly insufficient to sustain a verdict. Many men immediately before us and under our observation every day do unreasonable things, and it is unsafe to deduce conclusions because men are unreasonable.

It is claimed by the defendant's attorneys that if the testimony had been admitted that they could have shown by experienced hunters not only the strong probabilities of accident in this case, but that a killing by just such a wound as this was very narrowly escaped by two hunters. But Judge Stott ruled out such testimony, and only the supreme court has the right to review that decision.

THESE WOMEN FOLK.

How Hard-headed Men Estimate Some Things which they don't Understand.

Anybody who has led a domestic life knows how common such things as backache, and pains in the chest, are among the women who do the work. Often and perhaps generally the distresses are borne without much complaint. The women get about, and the machinery of the house goes on. Beyond this, those county-grained animals whom New England women call "the men folks," seldom look. So long as their wives or daughters are not actually in bed, under the doctor's care, the average thick-skull husband and father gives the subject no attention. At the same time, the poor household drudges who deserve a better fate creep around, broom or mop in hand, up stairs, down stairs and out of doors, doing that woman's work which "is never done." Losses of loved wives and fair girls—losses whose suddenness and unexpectedness astonish those wood-headed husbands and fathers—fall, seemingly, out of a clear sky, and form the tragical sequel to the story of neglect.

Now, you men who stand at the heads of ten thousand such homes, allow us to drop a word in your receptive ears. If these women of yours are worth having they are worth caring for. That back ache—that pain in the chest! what are they but forerunners of some organic trouble of the kidneys, the heart or the lungs? End it at once by the application of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER. It will soothe that nervous distress, drive away that pain, banish that dull, weary headache, give new strength to the body and fresh hope to the heart. No other plaster will do this. The Benson's Plaster, however, is not made to sell, but to heal. It is a remedy which never yet broke its promise and never will.

Your druggist has it. But before paying your 25 cents and putting the plaster in your pocket, look for the word CAPCINE cut in the middle.

THE BAD AND WORTHLESS

Are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy IMITATED is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world that Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine on earth, many imitations sprung up and began to steal the notices in which the press and people of the country had expressed the merits of H. B., and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to use their stuff instead, expecting to make money on the credit and good name of H. B. Many others started nostrums put up in similar style to H. B., with variously devised names in which the word "Hop" or "Hops" were used in a way to induce people to believe they were the same as Hop Bitters. All such pretended remedies or cures, no matter what their style or name is, and especially those with the word "Hop" or "Hops" in their name or in any way connected with them or their name, are imitations or counterfeits. Beware of them. Touch none of them. Use nothing but genuine Hop Bitters, with a bunch or cluster of green Hops on the white label. Trust nothing else. Druggists and dealers are warned against dealing in imitations or counterfeits.

ARE THE CHILDREN AT HOME?

Each day, when the glory [illegible]
Fades in the western sky,
And the wee ones, tired [illegible],
Go tripping lightly by,
I steal away from my husband,
Asleep in the easy chair,
And watch from the open door
Their faces fresh and fair.

Alone in the house [illegible]
That once was full of life,
Full of [illegible], her
Echoing with boyish strife
We two are waiting together;
And oft as the shadows [illegible]
With tremulous voice he calls me,
"It is night, are the children home?"

"Yes, love," I answer [illegible]
"They're all home long ago;"
And I sing in my quivering [illegible]
A song so soft and low,
Till the old man drops to slumber,
With his head upon his hand,
And I tell to myself the number
At home in the better land.

At home, where never a sorrow
Shall dim their eyes with tears;
Where the smile of God is [illegible]
Through all the summer years.
I know, yet my arms are empty
That fondly folded seven,
And the mother heart within me
Is almost starved for heaven.

Sometimes in the dusk of evening
I only shut my eyes,
And the children are all about me,
A vision from the skies,
The babes whose dimpled fingers
Lost the way to my breast,
And the beautiful ones, the angels,
Passed to the world of the blest.

A breath, and the vision is lifted
Away on the wings of light,
And again we two are together,
All alone in the night;
They tell me his mind is failing,
But I smile at the idle fears.
He is only back with the children,
In the dear and peaceful years.

And still as the summer sunset
Fades away in the west,
And the wee ones, tired of playing,
Go tripping home to rest,
My husband calls from his corner,
"Say, love, have the children come?"
And I answer with eyes uplifted,
"Yes, dear, they are all at home."

AFTERNOON DISPATCHES

Disastrous Ride.

BOSTON, Feb. 22.—At Milford to-day thirteen [illegible] were thrown from a double runner which struck a tree. Nearly all were picked up unconscious. The names of the maimed are, Mamie Murray, leg broken, amputation necessary; Edward Hogan, leg broken, internally injured; Lewis Crane and Willie Hickey, badly bruised and internally injured; Lucy Gleason, severe injuries on legs and back; Mary Doherty, badly injured on the face and head.

Dry Ground Appearing.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 23.—The river is declining at the rate of an inch an hour and is low enough to allow the steamers to use the public landing in inundated districts which are covered with wagons and filled with busy men. There seems no ground for alarm from the accumulation of filth and rubbish as the relief committee keep streets cleaned as fast as the water recedes.

The additional relief fund to-day amounts to $500, making a total of $14,600.

CAIRO, Ill., Feb. 23.—At midnight the river stood at five feet ten inches, and stationary. Levees still intact.

Aged Priest Dead.

ST. LOUIS, Feb 22.—Father Stever died here to-day. He was the oldest Catholic priest in the United States and one of the oldest in the world, being over 80 years old. He was the first priest to celebrate the holy sacrifice in Chicago.

Chapter of Fatalities.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 23.—The loss of the barkentine C. L. Taylor, of Cape Flattery, a few days ago, suggests a chapter of coincidences or series of fatalities extending over a protracted period worth recording. On the 9th of May, 1880, the bark Ranier, Capt. Wolfe, and the barkentine C. L. Taylor, Capt. Bergman, came into collision a few miles north of Cape Flattery. Both vessels were seriously damaged and compelled to return to the sound for repairs. The C. L. Taylor was at once libeled for $5000 on behalf of the Ranier, and a counter suit was instituted on the part of the C. L. Taylor, against the other craft. The cases went to the supreme court of the territory and were finally settled in this city, within the past week, the C. L. Taylor getting an award of $500, each party to pay their own costs. In the meantime the Rainier was lost at sea a year and a half ago, Capt. Wolfe being killed on her deck by the spanker boom, and the crew escaping in the long boat. The C. L. Taylor sailed the seas until the present week, when she, too, was lost near the place where the collision occurred, where Capt. Bergman, still in command, was so unfortunate as to lose both wife and son.

A Hoodlum's Diversion.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22. James Neary, a gaming hoodlum, broke a show window of a money broker's store on Kearney street this evening, and snatching a dummy roll of twenty dollar pieces, started and ran, followed by a crowd of men. Reaching Montgomery street, he turned and fired a shot at his pursuers, and after running two blocks further, fired a second shot, when he was tripped up by a special officer and taken to jail. The shots went wide of the mark, and nobody was hurt.

A Rough Voyage.

The steamship Gaelic, which arrived to-day from Hong Kong, encountered a cyclone in the China sea, and was knocked about severely, an immense wave striking her with such force as to bend the starboard plates of the iron house on the main deck. Two boats were carried away, and the iron rail on the side was badly damaged. The door of the captain's state room was literally wrenched from its hinges. She brought a large quantity of opium, seven packages of which is for British Columbia.

Fine Model.

A beautiful model of the steamer Queen of the Pacific, which has been placed on exhibition at the merchants' exchange, was built by Chief Engineer Magendie.

British Items.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—In the house of commons the government will move for the appointment of a committee to inquire into the expediency of the construction of the Channel tunnel.

Chief secretary for Ireland and the shorthand writer were present at the examination of witnesses at Dublin castle and state that witnesses were not threatened nor proffered drink.

The government has again asked Spain to release Cuban refugees surrendered at Gibraltar.

No Hogs Wanted.

BERLIN, Feb. 23.—The law against American hog products goes into effect one month after publication. Special rules will be made relating to Hamburg and Bremen supplying ships.

Why they Didn't Celebrate.

TORONTO, Feb. 22.—Americans here assign as a reason why they are not celebrating Washington's birthday that most of them have had serious family affliction during the past year.

Canadian Shootists.

OTTAWA, Feb. 22.—The Marquis of Lorne presided at a meeting of the artillery association, and promised to assist to send a team to Sheeburgress, England.

Will be Prosecuted.

MONTREAL, Feb. 23.—The Quebec government orders the prosecution of all who accepted money for the return of bodies found in medical colleges.

RESOLUTIONS.

Rev. T. J. Wilson, chairman of the committee on resolutions, introduced the following resolution,

Resolved, That we repudiate the brazen effrontery of the liquor dealers and speculators in before urging congress an extension of time in which to pay the tax on whisky in bonded warehouses, amounting in the aggregate to the enormous sum of $80,000,000; that we condemn the course of the members of the United States senate, including the two members of our own state, who have voted for the passage of this iniquitous measure, and that we enter our earnest protest against the enactment of the pending bill into law; and, further, that the above action be communicated by our corresponding secretary to our members in congress.

After discussion, the above resolution was passed by the alliance without a single dissenting vote.

The committee on resolutions further reported as follows:

Resolved, 1st, That as an alliance we recognize divine blessing in the measure of success which has attended our efforts the past year, and we feel encouraged to prosecute our labors for the time to come with renewed energy and zeal.

THE ORPHAN'S HOME.

The following resolution was submitted by Mr. Sehlbrede and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The Independent Order of Good Templars of the State of Oregon has established at the city of The Dalles a home for orphans, and

Whereas, We believe that the establishment of such a home and caring for homeless orphans, by a temperance organization, one of the effective means of accomplishing the great end for which we all so earnestly labor, therefore,
